TRUSTEES' REPORT.

The Trustees herein present their fortieth annual report; this and the accompanying reports of the different committees, give in detail the condition of the Institute and record of its usefulness for the past year.

It is evident from the reports of the chairmen of the different committees, that careful scrutiny has been exercised in the management of the Institute during the year.

The expenditures have been kept within the appropriations, and the funds entrusted to the committees have been wisely and judiciously expended.

The Librarian's report states the circulation to have been 34,930 volumes against 34,807 for the year previous, showing a steady annual increase; it is gratifying to note that this circulation is the largest yet attained.

It will be seen from the reports submitted this year, that the Lyceum Committee has conformed more strictly to the idea for which the Lyceum was instituted by Mr. Peabody; having confined its efforts to giving a course of instructive lectures, avoiding the musical entertainments that have been a feature of the Lyceum in years past.

While the attendance at the lectures has not been quite as large as formerly the superior benefits derived from an instructive course must in the end commend itself to the public.

The Trustees are in full accord with the idea presented by the Lyceum and Library Committee in its suggestion for better Reading Room accommodations, and hope that the financial condition of the Institute will admit of such an acquisition to the Library in the near future.

The reference to this matter in the Trustees' report of last year is equally true this year; no large expenditure of money can be made at present without detriment to the Institution.

The Trustees are pleased to commend the faithful and efficient work of the employees of the Institute during the past year.

H. F. WALKER,

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

LYCEUM AND LIBRARY COMMITTEE.

TO THE TRUSTEES OF THE PEABODY INSTITUTE :

In conformity with the regulations, I respectfully submit to you the reports of the sub-committees, in connection with which is the report of the Treasurer and also that of the Librarian.

It will be seen that the several departments have been managed with prudence and good judgment and that the officials have been fully cognizant, not only of their duties but of the responsibilities of the offices to which they have been chosen.

The additions to the Peabody Library have been timely, and were made with thoughtful reference to the wants of the community, and the needs of the Institution. The efficacy of a library can never be fairly estimated by the circulation of books, but it is always gratifying to see the list of borrowers increasing. It is pleasant to note the marked advance in substantial reading, and the evident desire for the better class of books which has become manifest. It is proof that the Institute is making its impress on the community, and that its influence is commensurate with its objects and traditions. Whatever may be said to the contrary, there is a large and increasing class of intelligent, discriminating readers in our midst. They are of the modest, unobtrusive kind who make no pretense of superior culture, but they keenly appreciate the good points of a good book, and are eager to keep in touch with the freshest products in the fields of literature. There are many amongst us to whom the Institute has been a solace and inspiration ; and this object should be ever borne in mind that it is the people's library, especially the common people.

Here too comes the collegian, vacation nearly over, and his unfinished essay yet before him. From the well stored shelves he obtains helpful aid, and from the Librarian kindly counsel. The young scholar with his history lesson unlearned, the professional man searching for authority on disputed points, the anxious business man who wishes to note the latest treatise on economics, or the newest discovery in science, all find here comforting aid and friendly answers to their inquiries. Then the thoughtful workingman, whose manual dexterity had always insured him a decent livelihood until confronted by the startling changes in the production of our staple industry, comes here to consult the newest discoveries in applied chemistry, and the latest advance in improved machinery. Without money and without price, without a feather's weight of burden to the anxious taxpayer, here, in these cheerful rooms, is gathered all the stores of mind and brain which earth's brightest sons have produced. Throughout the period of commercial gloom which we have passed, the Peabody Institute has been the bright spot in our midst. The historian, the poet, the novelist, the traveller and the scientist—all find here a restful receptacle, and each waits for his sympathetic disciples. Let us hope that no specious scheme in the name of sordid economy, will ever curtail its generous provisions or place a burden on its usefulness.

The Library Committee have been especially interested in their duties, and the contact with new books at every monthly meeting, inciting the members to literary discussion, has made theirs a labor of love. They have recommended and selected such books as seem necessary to our library and befitting a reading public. Very little of the "Vampire Literature" comes to their hands. It is easily avoided, and is not recognized by reputable publishers. But there is another evil which we all recognize and which is happily disappearing. It is the evil of the underbred book, whose bad example and vulgar ideals are more likely to be imitated than to be avoided. We are sensible of the number of young persons, physically undeveloped, who are suffering for want of proper nutriment, but we take little note of the many who are afflicted with intellectual anæmia from a thin diet of underbred literature. Let it be always understood that fiction has its position, honorably earned and firmly fixed for all time to come. Blessed be the genius that gave to the world Micawber and Sancho Panza and Dalgetty. They are as much a part of human existence as is Roger Bacon, or King Arthur. But there is a class of dubious novels which retail the scenes and actions of the fashionable set which hangs around the doubtful edge of foreign nobility, with which we have been flooded. Fortunately our library has but few of these, but their titles stare at us from every public bookstall. If the copy-right bill shall be the means of excluding them from our land, let us be thankful. The sneering question "Who reads an American book?" is no longer asked. Who does not read an American book confesses himself a bigot and a fool.

Our own writers command a place in the literary marts of the world. In purity, in force, in accurate delineation, in all that constitutes honest scholarship and earnest literary effort, their merit is now acknowledged. While we lament the loss of Prescott and Motley and Irving we recognize the growing fame and scholarly research of Fisk and MacMaster, and welcome the genius of Howells and Cable, the sparkle of Holmes and the natural grace of Miss Jewett and Miss Wilkins.

The work of the Sutton Library Committee does not appear to the casual observer. It is a work requiring delicacy, experience and judgment. The scope of this library is necessarily limited. Its accessions for the year have been made with care and good taste. The library room is too isolated to be popular with the ordinary visitor. If in the course of time the two libraries could be placed under one executive head, it is believed that the rare treasures which this room contains would be better appreciated, and its usefulness increased.

The Lecture Committee have given their best efforts to make their department a success. It has become a position of extreme delicacy. The palmy days of the lecturer no longer exist. A lecturer must be in the nature of an entertainer, if a full house is desired. The most brilliant speaker fails to draw, if his subject be a purely literary or scientific one. A literary lion from a foreign land, or a great traveller for whose safety all Christendom yearned, would be for a time objects of curious interest, but the age is essentially a reading one, and the omnipotent newspaper has dethroned the platform orator.

The necessity for increased room and better accommodations in the Reading Room is continually borne upon us. That it should be apart from the library room, no one will question. It is patronized by a quiet, thoughtful class of readers who represent the studious from all ranks of life. It is doing good now; it can be made more efficacious.

In conclusion, thanking the Board of Trustees for the courtesy and generosity which they have extended to the Committee, it is but just to say that the Peabody Library is in excellent order, the books in good condition, and all the executive work has been done in a thorough manner, befitting the dignity and character of the Institution.

THOMAS CARROLL,

Chairman L. & L. Committee.

LIBRARY COMMITTEE.

TO THE LYCEUM AND LIBRARY COMMITTEE:

The Peabody Library Committee submit the following report for the year ending Feb. 1, 1892.

The Librarian's report shows that the large increase in the circulation of books for the year 1891 has been more than maintained during the year that has just closed. The number of volumes borrowed from the Library has been 34,930 as compared with 34,807 for the year 1891. His report also discloses the fact that there has been a slight decrease in the use of books classified under Fiction and Juveniles, and an increase in the other and more substantial departments of the Library. Fiction and Juveniles during the past year cover 70 per cent. of the total circulation. This we believe is the lowest average ever reached in our history and compares most favorably with the use of this class of works in a great many of the Public Libraries throughout the state.

The accessions to the Library during the past year by gift and purchase have numbered 689 volumes—191 less than for the year 1891. This decrease is largely accounted for by the fact in the year 1891 large purchases of bound volumes of magazines were made to supply our wants in this direction. The actual decrease in the number of volumes bought for the Library, outside of the periodicals, has been 68 as compared with the year 1891. To this date the expenditures of the Library for this purpose have been kept within the appropriation, and enough remains to allow of moderate additions during the two months to the first of April. At the time of the renewal of the subscriptions to our list of Magazines, Jan. 1, 1892, your committee thought best to drop from the list some of the heavier publications of this class ; such as Blackwood's Magazine, the Contemporary Review, the Quarterly, the Westminster Review and Science.

These periodicals have a very limited reading among our patrons, largely because the best of their contents are found in such publications as Littell's Living Age and the Eclectic Magazine, which are found in our lists. The bound volumes of those works that have been dropped can be readily purchased to continue our sets.

By the additions of this year the whole number of volumes in the Peabody Library has been brought up to a total of 30,075. This enumeration does not include Congressional documents or the Patent office reports.

Your Committee can justly say that it is a most excellent collection of books, well balanced and well represented in all the departments into which a modern public library is divided. Taken in connection with the Sutton Reference Library it is very doubtful if any town in this country, of the same number of inhabitants as Peabody, possesses such complete and varied resources in its Public Library.

That portion of the Library room set apart for the use of readers seems to have a constantly increasing patronage. It is gratifying to note that of 300 volumes to which those who frequent the Library are allowed free access not one has been lost or even badly used.

There can be no doubt that this department of the Library might if proper facilities were provided be largely increased in its scope and usefulness. An ample and properly fitted Reading Room has become a necessary adjunct to every public library. Its extension and improvement in the Peabody Library would undoubtedly lead to an increased use not only of books of reference but of the Library as a whole. A pleasant and attractive reading room would be a standing invitation to every citizen of the town to patronize the Library. We bespeak for this department the earnest and practical attention of the Trustees.

For the Committee,

J. H. OSGOOD, Chairman.

LYCEUM COMMITTEE.

TO THE CHAIRMAN LYCEUM AND LIBRARY COMMITTEE:

Your Lyceum Committee respectfully submits the following report.

During the season of 1891 and 1892, ten lectures have been held.

We have endeavored, as far as possible, to furnish a course agreeable to the spirit of the donation of said work.

A new feature was added, by introducing a classical lecture on Richard Wagner's compositions, which, in the opinion of those musically interested, was a decided success.

The instructive lectures were well attended, while the scientific, though responded to by a smaller audience, were welcomed by lovers of science.

As was reported by the chairman of this Committee in his report of 1875, "we must meet the demands of all classes;" so is it true to-day, and the Committee have borne this in mind.

Appended is a list of lectures of 1891 and 1892.

Nov. 5, Mr. Herbert S. Renton. Subject, "A Day and Night in a Volcano." (Illustrated.)

Nov. 12, Rev. O. P. Gifford. Subject, "Problem of Life."

Nov. 19, Mr. Gamaliel Bradford. Subject, "Government of Massachusetts."

Dec. 10, Rev. R. S. McArthur, D. D. Subject, "The Empire of the Czar."

Dec. 16, Hon. John D. Long. Subject, "Abraham Lincoln."

Dec. 31, Prof. E. S. Morse. Subject, "Temples and Theatres of Japan."

Jan. 7, Mr. N. J. Corey. Subject, Wagner's "Parsifal," "Lohengrin," "Holy Grail." (Illustrated.)

Jan. 14, Prof. E. S. Morse. Subject, "Early Games of Mankind."

Jan. 21, Prof. E. S. Morse. Subject, "Wonders of Growth in Animals."

Jan. 29, Prof. E. S. Morse. Subject, "Origin of Species."

For the Committee,

FRANK E. HOBART, Chairman.

EBEN DALE SUTTON REFERENCE LIBRARY COMMITTEE.

TO THE LYCEUM AND LIBRARY COMMITTEE:

The report of the Librarian of the Eben Dale Sutton Reference Library for the year ending Jan. 30, 1892, and the doings of the Committee are herewith submitted.

The Librarian's report shows that the number of consultations has been but 274, a very small number as compared with former years. The number of visitors is also somewhat smaller, being 1,190 against 1,287 last year.

A reference to the list of bound volumes added during the year shows a very small increase; an increase that is meagre compared with previous years.

There are several reasons for this small list. A legacy from the previous Committee, of a bill of $226.55, for books added in 1890, and the regular income diminished somewhat for insurance, admonished the Committee not to order books until assured that there was money in the treasury to pay the bills.

There are also several publications to which the Library has already subscribed, and which are likely to come in at any time; money to pay for these should be on hand.

Another additional expense this year—one which comes only once in four or five years—was the cleaning. In May the library was thoroughly cleaned throughout; the carpet was taken up and the furniture received some needed repairs. The books were all taken out, and every shelf, alcove, and drawer was cleaned. The progress of this work showed that it was not attended to any too early.

The Committee congratulate themselves on a balance in the treasury. Of this balance $87.50 is from the additional $5,000 left by Mrs. Sutton, for the purchase of books, but it was covered into the treasury too late to be available before the year closed. Deducting the above sum, and the Librarian's salary up to the time when a further income will be available, a balance considerably less than $100 will remain.

Of the serials subscribed for during the year, a very valuable and interesting addition is "The Army and Navy of the United States," a finely illustrated work.

For the information of future Committees, it should be said that this is to consist of ten, possibly eleven numbers, and will be delivered in parts only, four numbers a year.

The interests of the Library have been carefully looked after by the Librarian, Miss Augusta F. Daniels, and she is entitled to special credit for extra time given, and for her careful supervision of the much needed and arduous work of cleaning.

For the Committee,

J. K. COLE, Chairman.

LIBRARIANS' REPORTS.

PEABODY LIBRARY.

TO THE LYCEUM AND LIBRARY COMMITTEE:

The report of the Librarian of the Peabody Library, for the year ending Feb. 1, 1892, is respectfully submitted.

The library was open every week day, except on the usual holidays, during the year.

The additions to the large stock of books will be seen to be less in number than last year, but the circulation is slightly greater.
